Thunder At Twilight Vienna 1913

It was during the carnival of 1913 that a young Stalin arrived in Vienna on a mission that would launch him into the upper echelon of Russian revolutionaries, and it was here that he first collided with Trotsky. It was in Vienna that the failed artist Adolf Hitler kept daubing watercolors and spouting tirades at fellow drifters in a flophouse.

Morton weaves together the stories of some of the most famous personages of the twentieth century who all happened to be in Vienna in 1913/1914. They include Trotsky, Freud, Hitler. Stalin, Viktor Adler, and others. They are, for the most part, the characters who will forge the new world, as the twilight of the old is turned to darkness.

Nonfiction Book Review: Thunder at Twilight: Vienna 1913 ...

This is a quite a fascinating history. Frederic Morton certainly knows Vienna in great detail. The subtitle is useful: "Thunder and Twilight." This line of the story is the coming of the end of an old world and Morton focusses on two key years 1913-1914. He develops his tale with two major historical forces in play: 1.

Thunder at Twilight: Vienna 1913/1914 book by Frederic Morton

What is generally less recognized is the role played by the government of Franz Josef in what WW-I might be called an accidental explosion. The events that occurred during the interval 1880-1914 are well covered in the two Morton volumes of popular history, "Thunder at Twilight" and "A Nervous Splendor."
